2. A criminal case in which several defendants participate, shall be considered by the court with participation of jurors with respect to all the defendants if at least one of them petitions for consideration of the criminal case by the court in such composition in the absence of any objections on the part of the other defendants. If one or several defendants refuse a jury trial, then the court shall decide whether separate criminal proceedings should be conducted with respect to such defendants. In so doing, the court must establish that the separation of the criminal case will not hinder the thoroughness and objectivity of settling the criminal case in a separate trial and the criminal case to be considered by the court with participation of jurors. If it is impossible to separate the criminal proceedings, then the criminal case as a whole shall be considered by the court with participation of jurors.

3. If the defendant has not entered a petition on his case to be considered by a court with the participation of jurors, the given criminal case shall be examined by another composition of the court in the order, laid down by Article 30 of the present Code.

4. In the resolution on an appointment of a criminal case to a hearing by a court with the participation of jurors shall be defined the number of the candidates for jurors, who shall be summoned to a court session and whose number shall be at least twenty, and shall be pointed out whether the court session is going to be open, closed or partially closed. In the last case, the court shall determine what part of the forthcoming session is going to be closed.

5. The resolution of the judge on the consideration of the criminal case with the participation of jurors is final. A subsequent refusal of the defendant from an examination of the case by a court with the participation of jurors shall not be accepted.

6. A copy of the resolution shall be handed in to the parties at their request.

Article 326. Compiling a Preliminary List of Jurors

1. After an appointment of the court session, the secretary of the court session or the deputy judge shall select on the orders of the presiding justice the candidates for jurors out of those entered into the general and reserve lists, kept in the court, randomly.

2. The secretary of the court session or the deputy judge shall check whether there exist any circumstances stipulated by a federal law, interfering with the given person's participation as a juror in the examination of the criminal case.

3. One and the same person cannot take part in the court sessions in the capacity of a juror more than once in the course of one year.

4. After selecting the candidates for jurors for taking part in the examination of the criminal case, a preliminary list shall be compiled with an indication of their surnames, names, patronymics and home addresses, which shall be signed by the secretary of the court session or by the deputy judge who has compiled the given list. Persons who by virtue of circumstances established by a federal law cannot participate in the consideration of a criminal case as jurors shall not be included in the preliminary list of candidates to jurors.

5. The surnames of the candidates for jurors shall be entered into the list in the order, in which the random option was made.

6. To the candidates for jurors shall be handed in notifications, where the date and the hour of their appearance at the court are pointed out, not later than seven days before the start of the judicial proceedings.

7. From the performance of the duties of jurors by their oral or written application the presiding judge may release persons older than 60; women having a child under three years of age; persons who by virtue of their religious convictions consider it impossible for them to take part in the administration of justice; persons whose distraction from the performance of their official duties may inflict essential harm to social or state interests; other persons having valid reasons for nonparticipation in a court session.

3. If less than twenty candidates for jurors have come to the court session, the presiding justice shall give an order on an additional summons of candidates for jurors to the court.

4. The lists of the candidates for jurors who have come to the court session, shall be handed in to the parties without an indication of their home addresses.

5. While explaining their rights to the parties, the presiding justice, in addition to the rights stipulated in the corresponding articles of Part One of the present Code, shall be also obliged to explain to them:

- 1) the right to enter a motivated objection to a juror;
- 2) the right of the defendant or his counsel for the defence to a motivated rejection of a juror, which may be declared by every participant twice;

- 2) introduce the parties;
- 3) explain what criminal case is subject to examination;
- 4) indicate the supposed duration of the judicial proceedings;
- 5) explain the goals facing the jurors and the terms for their participation in the examination of the given criminal case, stipulated by the present Code.

3. The presiding justice shall explain to the candidates for jurors their liability to truthfully answer the questions put to them and to give the necessary information on themselves and on their relationships with the other participants in the criminal court proceedings. After this, the presiding justice shall ask the candidates for jurors about the existence of any circumstances that may interfere with their participation in the capacity of jurors in the examination of the criminal case.

4. Every one of the candidates for jurors who have come to the court session shall have the right to point out the reasons, preventing him from the performance of the duties of a juror, and to enter a self-rejection.

5. On the petitions from the candidates for jurors on the impossibility for them to take part in the court proceedings shall be heard out the opinion of the parties, after which the judge shall adopt the decision.

6. The candidates for jurors, whose petitions for their relief from the participation in examining the criminal case are satisfied, shall be struck off the preliminary list and removed from the courtroom.

7. After the satisfaction of the self-rejections of the candidates for jurors, the presiding justice shall suggest that the parties avail themselves of their right to enter a motivated objection.

8. The presiding judge shall give the parties an opportunity to put questions to every one of the remaining candidates for jurors, which in their opinion have a bearing on the elucidation of the circumstances, interfering with the participation of the person in question in considering the given criminal case in the capacity of a juror. The defence shall be the first to question candidates for jurors. If a party is represented by several participants, the order of their participation in questioning effected by the party shall be established, as agreed by them.

9. After putting questions to the candidates for jurors is completed, every one candidate shall be discussed in the sequence of their presentation in the list of candidates. The presiding justice shall ask the parties whether they have any objections to raise in connection with the circumstances, preventing the given person from taking part in the consideration of the criminal case in the capacity of a juror.

10. The parties shall submit to the presiding justice the motivated petitions for the objections in writing, while not reading them out. These petitions shall be resolved by the judge without departure to the retiring room. The rejected candidates for jurors shall be struck off the preliminary list.

11. The presiding justice shall bring his decision on the motivated objections to the knowledge of the parties. He may also bring his decision to the knowledge of the candidates for jurors.

12. If as a result of the satisfaction of the announced self-rejections and of the motivated objections less than eighteen candidates for jurors are left, the presiding judge shall take measures, stipulated by the third part of Article 327 of the present Code. If the number of the remaining candidates for jurors is eighteen or more, the presiding justice shall propose that the parties put forth unmotivated objections.

13. The unmotivated objections to the jurors shall be put forth by the persons, mentioned in Item 2 of the fifth part of Article 327 of the present Code, by way of striking off the received preliminary list the names of the rejected candidates for jurors, after which these lists shall be handed over to the presiding justice without reading out the surnames of the rejected jurors. These lists, as well as the motivated petitions on the rejection of jurors shall be enclosed to the criminal case materials.

14. The first to put forth an unmotivated objection shall be the public prosecutor, who shall agree his position on the objections with the other participants in the criminal court proceedings on the side of the prosecution.

15. If several defendants are taking part in the criminal case, an unmotivated objection shall be made with their mutual consent, and if no consensus is reached - by equally dividing the number of the rejected jurors between them, if possible. If such division is impossible, the defendants shall realize their right to an unmotivated objection by the majority vote or by casting lots.

16. If the number of the unrejected jurors allows for this, the presiding justice may grant to the parties the right to an equal number of additional unmotivated objections.

17. After all questions involved in the self-rejections and in the objections to the candidates for jurors are dealt with, the secretary of the court session or the deputy judge shall compile on the orders of the presiding justice a list of the remaining candidates for jurors in that sequence, in which they were entered into the initial list.

18. If the number of the unrejected candidates for jurors exceeds fourteen, into the protocol of the court session, on the orders of the presiding justice shall be entered the first fourteen candidates in the list. Taking into account the character and the complexity of the criminal case, per the decision of the presiding justice may be selected a greater number of reserve jurors, who shall also be entered into the protocol of the court session.

19. After this, the presiding judge shall announce the results of the selection, while not pointing out the reasons for the removal from the list of certain candidates for jurors, and shall thank the rest of the candidates.

20. If the remaining candidates for jurors are less than fourteen, the necessary number of persons shall be summoned to the court in addition, in accordance with the reserve list. With respect to the candidates for jurors, newly summoned to the court, the questions involved in relieving them from the participation in considering the criminal case and in the relevant objections shall be resolved in the order established in this Chapter.

21. The presiding justice shall read out the surnames, names and patronymics of the jurors, entered into the protocol of the court session. The first twelve jurors shall form a college of jurors on the criminal case, and the last two shall take part in the examination of the criminal case in the capacity of the reserve jurors.

22. After the formation of the college of jurors is completed, the presiding justice shall propose to the twelve jurors to occupy the seats assigned for them in the jury box, which shall be separated from those present in the courtroom and shall be as a rule situated opposite the dock. The reserve jurors shall take in the jury box the seats, specially assigned for them by the presiding justice.
